THURRAGE OF THE COLORED POPULATION.—We learn that on Sunday last a colored woman named Amelia Johnson, living on Drake-street, gave birth to four fine, healthy male children. The crowd are doing well. This affair has occasioned considerable excitement among the colored people, both male and female, and the house has been besieged by a crowd of them, some of whom were willing to pay for a sight of this wonderful woman. She would have pleased Napoleon Bonaparte; for once when he was in sore need of soldiers, the talented and witty Madame de Stael approached and asked him whom he thought the smartest woman in France? The one who gives birth to the most children, was the astounding reply.

ball clubs and the numerous ones interested in the game were sorely vexed when they found it was raining and that there was every appearance of its continuing all day, and many were the blue looking faces in consequence But brighter things were in store for them By ten c'clock, the sun broke through the clouds and dissipated them as it did the cloudy faces heretofore reterred to. All arrange ments were then made for

THE GAME The game was called at half-past one o'clock, the clubs having proceeded to the ground to the music of the Washington Cornet Band, colored, of Savannah. The place selected was on the Meeting-street side of the Green. At the upper end two tents were pitched, under which were refreshments for the players. From one tent floated a large blue banner, inscribed, "Savannah." The band was posted at the extreme upper end, and at intervals during the game discoursed excellent music. There were several white and colored policemen on the ground under the command of Lieutenant W. N. Taft, who were detailed to preserve order and to prevent the crowd from treepassing upon that portion of the ground selected for the game, and which was marked off, partially by ropes, and at the lower end by flags. There were from fifteen hundred to two thousand people upon the ground, the majority of them being negroes.

The uniform of the Savannah Club was a full suit of gray flannel, trimmed with blue; that of the Carolina Club being of white flannel, and also trimmed with blue—both clubs presenting an attractive appearance.

About two o'clock the clubs took their posi-tions and the playing commenced, and was continued steadily until about five o'cleck, when the ninth inning was finished and the Savannah Club declared victorious. This an nouncement was greeted with three rousing cheers from the crowd and "Dixie" from the band. Mr. Geo. G. Kimball, captain of the Savannah nine, proposed three cheers and s tiger for the Carolina Club, which were given with a will, as were the "three and a tiger' proposed by Mr. E. F. Schacte, for the Savannah Club. THE SCORE,

July 26th. Game played on Citadel Gr From the second inning it was manifest that the Savannah Club would be victorious, every one observing that they were better organized and were more accusto ned to one another's playing. As we stated when the Carolina Club first declined to play, most of their best men were absent from the city, and those present were not in practice. But at the urgent request of the Savannah Club they consented not to postpone the match, and then commenced practicing, hoping to make a fair struggle, but not believing they would be successful. Under these circumstances we must say, and all who witnessed the game will agree with us, that their playing was very credit-

THE RIOT. During the game the police experienced considerable difficulty in preventing the crowd from trespassing upon the ground allotted to the players. Immediately after the close of the regular game the crowd rushed around the scorers to ascertain how the score stood. The cinhs then concluded to have a little game of pitching and catching and commenced it, before doing so, however, requesting that the crowd should be made to move back. The police commenced to perform this unpleasant duty, but their force was too small. Major Ogilby, of the United States Army, was requested to send some of his soldiers to the aid of the police. He consented, and six unarmed soldiers came up. The work of forcing the crowd back over the rope stretched on the Meeting-street side of the Green commenced. During this movement, a mulatto, named Bafe Izzard, became very discretely and insolent to a policeman, who, after requesting him to behave, arrested him, whereupon Rafe struck the policeman and endeavored to get away. Then ensu d a general melee, during which the police resisted the efforts of the negroes to rescue Rafe, striking them over the head with their clubs. The six soldiers seized the base ball bats lying about and rushed to the assistance of the polica. Major Ogilby endeavored to stop the melee, but his efforts were, of course, futile. The negroes were repid y reinforced and were about to overpow rthe police and their six soldier assistants, when a squad of armed soldiers came up, loading their muskets as they came. The ne groes gave one look at the bristling bayonets. and then flad precipitately from the Green into Meeting-street. The soldiers did not pursue. The negroes then commenced tearclubs. They also pulled up the paving stones. On learning of the action of the negroes the soldiers were ordered to advance upon them. The police and detective forces also advanced, before whom the negroes retreated to the corper of Calbonn and Meeting streets, throwing bricks and other missiles as they did so. The soldiers followed, keeping inside of the fence, while the police went into the street and endeavored to arrest the ringleaders. Two or three men were arrested, but during the rush and excitement were rescued. During all this time the soldiers were most anxious to shoot,

but were restrained by their officers-Major

Ogiloy at one time remarking: "The man who shoots without orders I will go for." In twenty minutes after this riot commenced everything was quiet. A squad of soldiers were stationed at the corner of Calhonn and injured during this affair.

DESPERATE NEGRO. The cessation of the disturbance, caused by the appearance of the soldiers, was taken advantage of by the two policemen who had Bafe Izzard in charge, and they took him inside of the Citadel, where he used his hands, head, feet and teeth in his efforts to get loose, all the while yelling as if he was being murdered doubtless hoping to incite the negroes outside to make further efforts to rescue him. Rafe finally became so disorderly that the officers on duty ordered him to be placed in the guardhouse, in which were confined several Irish soldiers for violations of army regulations. Rafe had hardly been thrust inside of the prison before the soldiers set upon him and commenced to beat him most unmercifully and most probably would have killed him had he not been taken out.

ASSAULT UPON THE BANK The disturbance of course put a stop to all further base-balling, and preparations were made to start to the Vigilant Engine House, on State-etreet, where a supper had been spread. The members of the Savannah Club said they would so to the Charleston Hotel, pack up their effects and rejoin the Carolina Club at the hotel and march with them from there to the engine house. IIt was then agreed that the band should remain behind with the Carolina Club. The Savannah Club started to the hotel, and the Carolina Club joined in line on the Green, and headed by the band marched towards the main gate on Calhonn-street.

When the disturbance first commenced ther were not-over a thousand negro men present but by this time there were fully twenty-five hundred. When the band reached the gate, the negroes crowded up and commenced an unprovoked assault upon the members of the band, calling them Democrats, and throwing rocks and pieces of bricks at them. Three of the band were struck with the missiles. The player on the trumbone seized that instrument by the small end with both hands and swung it around, knocking down seven or eight of the assailants. Just at this moment a young gentleman fired in rapid succession three shots from his revolver, which, though doing no damage, had the effect of stampeding the negroes-not one being within pistol range when the last shot was fired. It is proper to state that two shots were fired from the street where the negroes were previous to the firing of the three shots mentioned. The three colored men were then carried into the Citadel, where the surgeon dressed the wornils, none being of

The wounded members of the band are as named: W. H. Woodhouse, wounded in the head; Benjamin Morell, in the stomach; R.H. Barke, in the head. THE MAYOR POWERLESS.

As soon as this assault was made the military marched out in strong force and drove the crowd from off the corners. In this work they were aided by the police. Mayor Pillsbury rode up at this point, and upon being asked what was to be done, replied that he did not know, as he was perfectly powerless, the police force being inadequate to quell the riot. He then drove off. General tobert H. Anderson, Chief of the Savannah Police, on learning this, went to Colonel Eddy, who was an officer in the old army with him and asked him to farnish protection for the band, to which request, as we learn, Colonel Eddy replied that he would comply if the Mayor stated that it was necessary, or would request it officially. The Mayor returned shortly after his departure, and requested the services of the military. Colonel Eddy detailed about sixty men, under command of Lieutenants Savage and Lynch, to escort the clubs and band down. The line was then formed in the following order: Squad of soldiers, band, squad of soldiers, members and friends of the Carolina Club, omnibus containing wounded members of the band, squad of soldiers; or each side were squade of the police and detective forces. The line then proceeded into Calhounstreet, down that to King, down King to Wentworth, up Wentworth to Meeting, down Meeting to the Charleston Hotel.

When the line marched out of the gate some of the negroes commenced yelling: "The soldiers have got all of the band and club men under arrest," and then the mob set up a tremendous cheering, and ran up and down in the most excited manner. At the corner of King and Calhoun streets a number of them threw stones at the line, but upon the soldiers facing about, ran off. With this exception there was no interruption until after leaving the hotel. During this march the band played "Dixie." "Bonnie Blue Flag." and other favorits Southern tunes, which the negroes greeted with hisses, hoots of derision and groans.

THE SUPPER. At the Charleston Hotel the clubs partook of some champagne, and there formed in line again, it being increased by the addition of the members and friends of the Savannah Club. They then marched up Hayne to State street and down it to the engine house of the Vigilant Fire Company. A very nice supper was spread in the lower portion of the building, and the c'ubs were soon in the full enjoy ment of it. The soldiers and police remained outside and kept the crowd of negroes at bay, but they were not forgotten by those inside.

Soon toasting commenced, and after the presentation of the ball to the victorious club, Mayor Pillsbury, who had accompanied the line from the Citadel, was called upon.

He, as others had done before him, express ed the deepest regret for what had occurred stating that he had gone to the ground to witness the game, and was surpised and mortifie to see that a riot was in progress, and being utterly powerless to quell it with the force at his command, he had requested a detachment of the military, which had been granted. He had been unable, up to this time, to ascertain the origin of the riot, or to learn who were the origina ors; but I give my pledge that every effort that can be made will be exerted to bring the perpetrators to justice. And I furthe pledge that every man of the excursionist shall be protected so long as he remains in the Three cheers and a tiger were given, after which General R. H. Anderson, (ex-Confederate) was called upon. He stated that he had cailed upon Colonel Ed ly, who was an old army triend of his, and requested protection for the band, which he had granted. He then proposed the Colonel's healtn, which was drank, and three cheers and a tiger given for him.

Lieutenant Savage, who was in command o the detachment on duty at the hall, was called upon. He stated that he and his soldiers had been detailed to protect the excursionists from the negro mob, and they would do their duty. DEPARTURE.

Some further toasting and speech-making followed, after which the line was reformed and murched down State-street-the negroes who had had large accessions to their original ly large numbers following, now and then throwing missiles, but bur.... no one. At the corner of State and Queen streets, and also at the corner of Broad and East Bay streets, the mob gave every indication of charging the line but shrunk back each time as the soldiers turned upon them. At Boyce's whart, where the steamer Nick King lay, the Chief of Police who arrived shortly after the first riot, so posted the troops and the police as to prevent the negroes from going upon the wharf. After some little delay, during which Meeting streets, and at the gate on Meeting- President McCabe and others of the Carstreet. Two of the policemen were slightly lina Club made short speeches, in them expressing their regret that the diagraceful riot and occurred, the steamer left. Wulle on the wharf, the negroes collected upon the opposit wharves and endeavored to hurl brickbats mong the crowd around the steamer, but only a half a dozen or so pieces struck on the wharf-the rest falling short. Those who accompanied the excursionists to the whar were assailed by the mob on returning, and one or two slightly injured.

CONCLUSION.

In closing this account we would fail in our duty did we not say that the conduct of Lieutenant Wm. N. Taft, of the police force, and both the white and colored policemen under him; Lieutenant E. A. Phillipy, Officers Nip son, Lovett, Davis, Quinn, Roberts, and Free man, (colored) of the detective force, was most gallant and deserving of the highest praise. The Chief and Lieutenant Chapman, of the police force, did efficient service. To Major Ogilby, Lieutenants Savage and Lynch, REFINED FAMILY LARD, with those above mentioned, are the clubs of both Savannah and Charleston greatly indebted. for but for the coolness and determination of these officers some of their lives would have been sacrificed to the blind fury of the mob.
